Title: A presentation on the Economy and Finance

(The Global Financial Crisis: The Aftermath)

Governments and their central banks around the world have undertaken a massive intervention –the largest peacetime intervention in economic history- to avoid a complete collapse in the global financial system and a global depression. The battle may have been won for now, but by only addressing the symptoms, not the roots of the problems that led to this crisis. While not solving the underlying problems, this intervention has led to an unprecedented increase in the supply of money and a huge run-up in government debts, that will have to be serviced with higher interest rates, higher taxes and cutbacks in government spending. In this presentation the speaker will look at the consequences of these actions and how they will affect us going forward. (The presentation will be in English but your questions can be answered in Greek as well)
